Variety In Coats Featured

Sleeves Seen In Many New Forms.

HIP-LENGTH TUNICS

The big coat is made a feature here. Some of the coats tend towards elaboration. A big coat, for instance, has collar and revers exaggerated into four big blobs which seem to radiate from the neck. These fold and wrap so that the throat can be snugly contained.

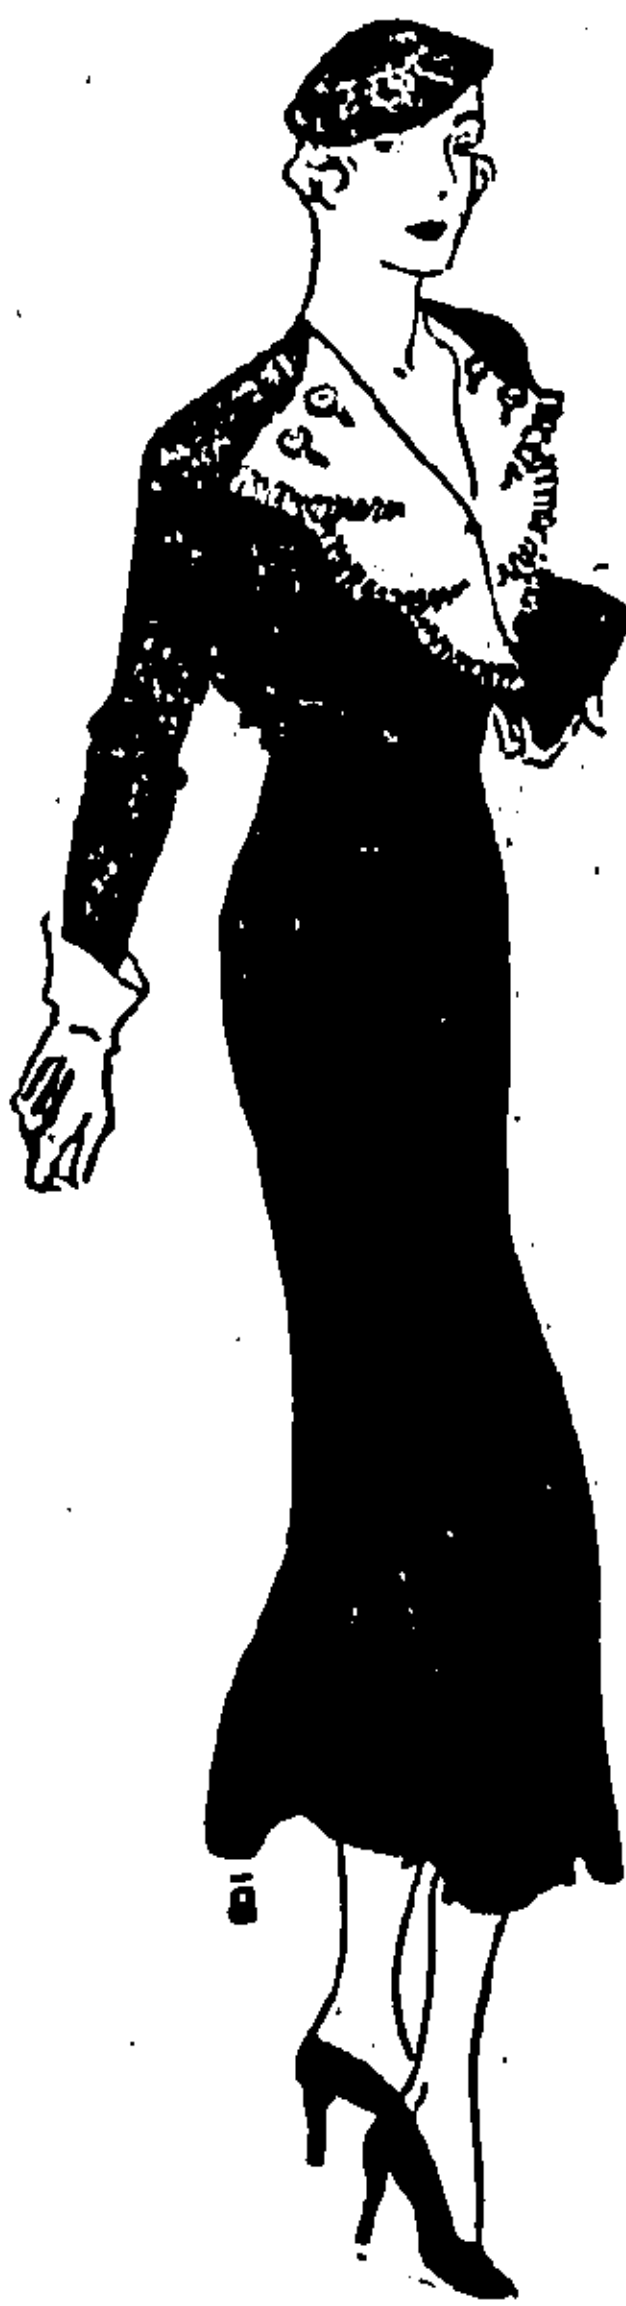

Revers offer a good deal of scope. They may be made to start from the shoulders and reach to the waist in rounded form. Large pocket flaps echo the line. A wool coat may have leopard-skin sleeves—there is much leopard about this year.

Down one side of the belted coat are three large rings. The collar is really a scarf which is twisted round the neck and the long ends of which pass through these rings. Safety-pins are another form of ornament.

Sleeves are a feature here, despite the large number of long, narrow, or slightly leg-of-mutton varieties which are worn with afternoon, morning, and sometimes evening frocks.

A plain evening frock with a belt and a knee flounce has enormous gathered "flowers" of the material, which are clapped on to the shoulders and pressed round them to look like large sleeves.

Three-quarter sleeves are seen in a black and white dress, while what would otherwise be a high-necked, short-sleeved evening dress with a train, becomes half and half with the shoulders cut away, leaving a strap of sleeve round the arm and something like a narrow bib at the throat finished with two dahlias.

Dresses with hip-length tunics are many. They may have long or short sleeves and often a pleat down the side of the skirt. They may be worn with stock ties, with jabots, and with loops of a contrasting material.

A huge bow may also be plastered over their fronts. Sometimes a broad line of white where the low neck would be in an evening frock. This collection depends largely on distinctive detail of which there are many examples.

Spaghetti And Ham Cakes

2 oz. cold cooked spaghetti, 4 oz. ham, 2 or 3 tomatoes, 2 tablespoons cheese (finely grated), seasoning, ½ oz. butter, ½ oz. flour, ½ gill stock, egg and breadcrumbs. Skin one of the tomatoes and chop it up: Melt butter, add flour, stir in the stock and chopped tomato, and bring the sauce to the boil. Stir in the ham previously minced also the chopped spaghetti, and grated cheese. Season to taste, spread mixture on plate to cool. Divide into 4 portions and form them into round cakes. Brush with egg, coat with breadcrumbs and fry till golden. Decorate each with a slice of tomato lightly baked and garnish with parsley.

November Casserole

¾ lb. chestnuts, 1½ lb. stewing steak, 1½ dessertspoon flour, 1 pint water, 1 pint diced celery, 2 onions, pepper and salt. Cut up the steak into a casserole. Add the water, and mix it with the flour. Season stir it round then put the casserole into the oven and bring to the boil. Put the chestnuts in cold water and boil them for 10 minutes, then remove a few at a time, and take off the shells and inner brown skins. Cut celery into dice and peel and slice onions. Add these all to the casserole. Bring the contents up to the boil again and let them simmer very gently until the meat and chestnuts are quite tender.

Chocolate Bread Pudding

1 cup stale breadcrumbs, 2 cups boiled milk, 1 square chocolate, 1/8 cup sugar, 1 egg, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Soak bread in milk 30 minutes, melt chocolate. Add ½ the sugar and enough milk from bread and milk to pour. Then add to the mixture the remaining sugar, salt, vanilla, and egg beaten up. Turn into pudding dish and bake 1 hour in a moderate oven. Serve with hard sauce.

Lentil and Tomato Soup

¼ pint lentils, one onion, ½ pint tomato soup, seasonings, ¼ pint lentil liquor, water. Wash the lentils and soak them for a few hours. Then cook them till tender, adding the onion peeled, a little salt to flavour, and enough water to cover them. Drain them well and save the liquor in which the lentils were boiled. Put the left-over tomato soup into a saucepan, add the cooked onion (chopped) and the drained lentils. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt and stir in a quarter of a pint of the lentil liquor. Bring the soup to the boil. If soup seems too thick thin down with milk.

Fish and Cheese Patties

6 patty cases, 3 or 4 oz. cooked flaked fish, ½ lb. butter, 1½ teaspoons flour, 1 gill milk, 1 oz. cheese, 1 egg yolk, seasoning. Left-over fish can be used for this dish. Have ready 5 puff pastry patty cases. Melt the butter, stir in the flour and when well blended add the milk and bring this sauce to the boil. Boil it gently for a few minutes, take it off the stove and stir in the egg yolk and finely grated

THOSE "MORNING" EXERCISES

A Little Sometimes Done At Night.

DO MANY WOMEN REALLY PERSEVERE?

Morning exercises seem to be called "morning" because that is the time when they are usually not done.

At night before getting into bed the morning exerciser sometimes achieves a little. She thinks of her waist, of the back of her neck; she wonders whether her arms are as thin as they were.

In any case, other people are doing morning exercises. Thus goaded and beaten into action, she counts six times or twelve times, as the case may be, she rises slowly upon her shoulders and pedals rather hopelessly into the air; she lies on her back and concentrates on that crease round the waist and she may even do honey-pots sideways as well as backwards and forwards.

But as for morning exercises—there may be strong-minded people who really occupy the half-hour before breakfast with regular exertion. One does not often meet them, nor do most people give the least impression that they have been able to carry on the process for more than the first few days.

ed cheese. Add seasoning to taste and the flaked fish, heat the mixture thoroughly for a few minutes, stirring well but do not let it boil. Heat it in the hot patty cases and serve.

Afternoon Styles Attractive

Beautiful Materials Predominate.

MEDICI COLLARS SEEN

Some of the most attractive of the new season's collection are those destined for the afternoon. Here the great plainness is carried out in beautiful materials and is mitigated a little by long sleeves slightly bigger at the top but not leg-of-mutton.

The small, high collar is enhanced by a large U of gold chains which decorates the front of the dress as though it were a shirt bosom.

A velvet dress may have a sort of wide, V-shaped guimpe—some of the dresses would be entirely unlike if they had full skirts instead of straight ones. A bow that sticks out behind beyond the head sometimes finishes these necks.

Here and there Medici collars appear—this particularly in connection with evening coats, but there are also little stand-up collars, an inch or two high, which are brought round to the front in a V, where the edges are pressed together.

BLUE RANKS HIGH IN POPULARITY.

Many Shades In Paris Offerings.

"GENDARME" BLUE FAVOURITE

If any one colour can be picked out from the maze of the midseason colour offerings in the current Paris openings, it is blue. The favourite, for the moment, is called "gendarme" blue. It is a navy blue, slightly lighter and greyer than ordinary navy, and is the colour of the coat, only, of the gendarme's costume—the trousers are light blue.

Molyneux's blue is very bright, much lighter than navy, much more like royal blue, and is much used for evening clothes. Vionnet sets back on her old favourite—light blue dresses worn under navy coats.

Augustabernard uses a blue that is almost white, for evening dresses, and calls it porcelain. She also has another blue that she uses for scarfs, shoulder straps and the like; it is very much like the blue in Della Robbia's.

A QUESTION OF GLOVES.

Should They Be Worn With Evening Toilet?

Whether gloves should or should not be worn with an indoor evening toilet is still a matter for discussion.

But those who prefer the hands and arms covered are choosing white kid or peach-beige gloves with an all-over design in open-work. They make a particularly effective accompaniment to an all black velvet gown.

CULBERTSON

by Ely Culbertson.
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

REACHING THE CORRECT CONTRACT

Reaching the correct contract in Contract Bridge is, generally speaking, a matter of giving and receiving information. Players who love to pre-empt on hands in which the proper Opening is an Approach bid and who love to force on hands where simple Takeouts are in order find that with tremendous frequency they reach unworkable contracts and play the hand in the wrong suit or play it in a suit when it should be played in notrump.

So well understood to-day are the correct principles of bidding that there is really very little excuse for partners going far wrong in the process of exchanging information and only in cases where they encounter very unfavourable distribution should large penalties follow any tested partnership bidding.

An interesting example of a splendid exchange of partnership inferences occurred in a recent Duplicate game on the hand below:

3D (3) Pass 3S (4) Pass
4NT (5) Pass 5D (6) Pass
6NT (7) Pass Pass Pass

1—West's hand is almost strong enough for an Opening Forcing bid of two but the distribution suggests strongly the wisdom of making an Approach bid in preference.

2—East has two alternatives, either a bid of three spades or the one actually chosen—namely, two notrump. Considering the fairly balanced nature of his hand the two-notrump response, which, while not Forcing, is very strong, appears the better.

3—There is no occasion for West to force in this position. East's first response to his Opening call assures him that when he shows added strength by bidding a new suit a game contract at least will be reached.

4—East also knows that there will be further bidding, and while he could now bid four spades he purposely under-bids in order to gain further information.

5—West's hand certainly justifies this bid, which shows two Aces and the King of a bid suit. West knows now that there is a fit in spades and that a contract of five in one suit or the other would be reasonably safe. 6—East now shows that he can also support the diamonds bid by his partner.

7—West knows that East must hold either the King or Ace of clubs, to have justification for the two-notrump call. The bid of six notrump rather than six in a suit is perfectly correct based on the distribution and on the further fact that the hand was played in a Duplicate game scored on the match-point basis.

TO-MORROW'S HAND
South is playing a contract of four hearts. West's Opening lead is the diamond Ten, which is won in the closed hand with the King. If South now returns the club 7, what card should West play, and why?

The leading roles are portrayed by Claudette Colbert, Ben Lyon and Ernest Torrence, with a powerful cast in support. Miss Colbert takes the part of the smuggler's daughter.

OXFORD VASTLY SUPERIOR

Professional Touch In Evidence.

VARSITY STANDARD IMPROVING

(BY ROLAND ALLEN)

I cannot apply any of these curious considerations to explaining why Oxford were so decisively superior to Cambridge in the University Soccer match. It was the best University match I have seen in ten seasons.

It was almost weird to see a University team playing with something approaching an objective, getting the ball down "dead" on to the frozen pitch, making their passes swiftly and accurately, and running to the places where the ball was going to be.

There was a frankly professional touch about the football of Oxford, in particular. Both centre half-backs played what is called the modern game, with just that suspicion of adventurousness which saved it from dullness. If the University Soccer standard is still comparatively low, it is improving rapidly—and in more or less the right way.

BOYD NOW WITH SHEFFIELD UNITED TEAM

Arsenal Prepared To Pay £6,000.

SHEFFIELD TRADITION BROKEN

(BY GEOFFREY SIMPSON)

SOME time before the Arsenal signed on Coleman, the late Mr. Herbert Chapman, in his search for a centre forward, went quietly to Scotland, sat in the stand at Clyde, and took a look at William Boyd.

The Clyde leader has now joined Sheffield United, who can probably do with him more than Arsenal, but it is said that the London club were prepared to sign a cheque for anything up to £6,000 if Boyd proved the man they wanted.

It is curious how the two clubs are linked up in these negotiations. Sheffield would have had no need of Boyd had they not transferred Dunne to Arsenal.

Dunne's price was about £8,000, which would probably be double the present fee for Boyd, so that Sheffield have made a nice profit over the exchange of players.

English Style They have got a good player too. Boyd is not a big man, being 5ft. 8in. and weighing 11st., but he is very quick, has two scoring feet, and is so English in his style that he should quickly settle down in the United attack.

He has scored 99 goals during his three years with Clyde, and has been capped by Scotland against Italy and Switzerland, and also played for the Scottish League.

Boyd was born in Cambuslang, which was also the birthplace of Andy Wilson, and if he develops into as great a centre forward as Wilson was in his Middlebrough days Sheffield United have made a wonderful capture.

For all that, there will be some surprise in Sheffield at the transfer, as Scottish players have been out of favour at Bramall-lane for many years.

In spite of being opposed to a magnificent Y.M.C.A. defence and being a goal in arrears at the interval, the Macao Hockey Club maintained their 100 per cent. record by a brilliant victory yesterday by the odd goal in three, Manhao, the Macao inside right netting the winning goal ten minutes from time before one of the largest crowds seen in Macao.

Macao played brilliantly throughout, and their fine turn of speed, man for man, and stick-work played a great part in their well deserved win.

Fitness was also an apparent asset of their team for the Y.M.C.A. possessed at least two men who were certainly not fit to stand up to the terrific pace at which the game was played.

The outstanding feature of game was undoubtedly the superb display of Selk and Murphy at back and the really fine display of D. McLellan and H. J. D. Lowe in the intermediate line. McLellan was the mastermind of the "Y" defence.

Selk was brilliant in his interceptions and his terrific turn of speed and fitness told on the Macao left wing formation which was the most formidable.

Murphy played his best game for many a season, and never allowed the ball to pass him during the first half.

Weak "Y" Forwards.

The "Y" forward line was very weak as compared with the Macao team and, with the exception of a very fine movement in the first half which resulted in Lammet netting the "Y" goal and a movement in the last five minutes of the game which should have resulted in a goal, they were entirely out of the picture.

MACAO'S NINE VICTIMS

The following have been the results of visit teams in Macao this season:—

2nd H.K.S. Battery	3-4
University	0-5
University	0-6
United	0-6
Radio	0-1
R.A.S.C.	0-8
Medway Officers	2-3
Lincolns	1-2
Y.M.C.A.	1-2

J. Ferreira, the Macao pivot, played a brilliant game, but was not in the same class as McLellan. Rosario and Angelo, comprising the left wing, were the most dangerous, the latter never missing a ball throughout the game.

Almeida in goal for Macao was good and cleared well when called upon, while F. Fowler played his best game of the season for the Y.M.C.A. The latter made a really wonderful save in the first half when Manhao shot and he dived across the goalmouth to concede a fruitless corner.

The Macao team were badly at fault throughout the game when stopping the ball with their hands, a knock-on resulting on practically every occasion, and each one went unchecked.

Lammet scored in the first half for the "Y" Macao equalising in the second half through Manhao who also netted the winning goal.
L. F. de Costa and Mr. J. Green.
Macao—Almeida, J. Rodrigues, and J. P. Pereira and Alvaro.
F. Nolasco, Manhao, Rosario, and A. Angelo.
Y.M.C.A.—F. Fowler, E. F. Selk and E. O. Murphy, H. J. D. Lowe, D. McLellan (Captain), and J. M. Wilson.
F. Fowler, W. J. Brown, G. P. Lammet, G. H. Fowler and T. J. Price.

(BY STICKS)

BRILLIANT PLAY BY KALWANT SINGH, GURBACHAN SINGH, AND AWATAR SINGH, THE RADIO FORWARDS, COUPLED WITH THE STERLING DISPLAYS OF BOTH GOAL-KEEPERS, R. H. WONG AND G. MOSS, WERE THE OUTSTANDING FEATURES OF THE SECOND INTERPORT HOCKEY TRIAL IN PREPARATION FOR THE FORTHCOMING VISIT OF MACAO AT KING'S PARK YESTERDAY.

Contrary to expectations the "Colours" proved a much better side and defeated the "Whites" by 4 goals to 3, after sharing four goals in the first half.

The three Radio forwards gave a splendid exhibition of marksmanship, sharing the seven goals scored. Gurbachan Singh netted three for the Colours, Awatar Singh recorded the "hat-trick" for the Whites; and Kalwant Singh scored the remaining goal for the Colours.

Play commenced in a very scrappy manner, but the two sides gradually settled down to fast and spectacular hockey.

The Colours enjoyed the better of the early exchanges, and after the first half the goal-keepers changed sides. This had the desired effect of giving both custodians a real test, and they emerged with honours very even indeed.

Both forward lines were very fast and combined well, but the Colours proved more deadly in the circle. Perkins was disappointing at centre.

E. F. Flincher, however, maintained sound combination with Kalwant Singh, the latter making many openings for Gurbachan Singh to add the finishing touches.

On the other side Lt. Donald and Lt. Eaden settled down to fast combination with Awatar Singh who was quite at home to their fast play. Lt. Eaden was the most aggressive forward on the field, but was too well shadowed by Pat White to be able to score.

The Whites intermediate line was decidedly the better of the two, Halford and Hanson being outstanding.

Both full-back lines were fully extended, Rodrigues and White excelling themselves under the heaviest pressure. Jack Rodger played his usual sound game.

THE GAME

KALWANT SINGH opened the score early for Colours early in the game after a solo effort. Wong stopped the stinging shot, but the Indian was on him before he could clear it.

Colours went further ahead shortly after when Flincher broke away on the wing to centre for Kalwant Singh to pass to GURBACHAN SINGH who made no mistake.

Whites attacked strongly, but Moss gave a fearless display in goal, clearing repeatedly from many tight corners.

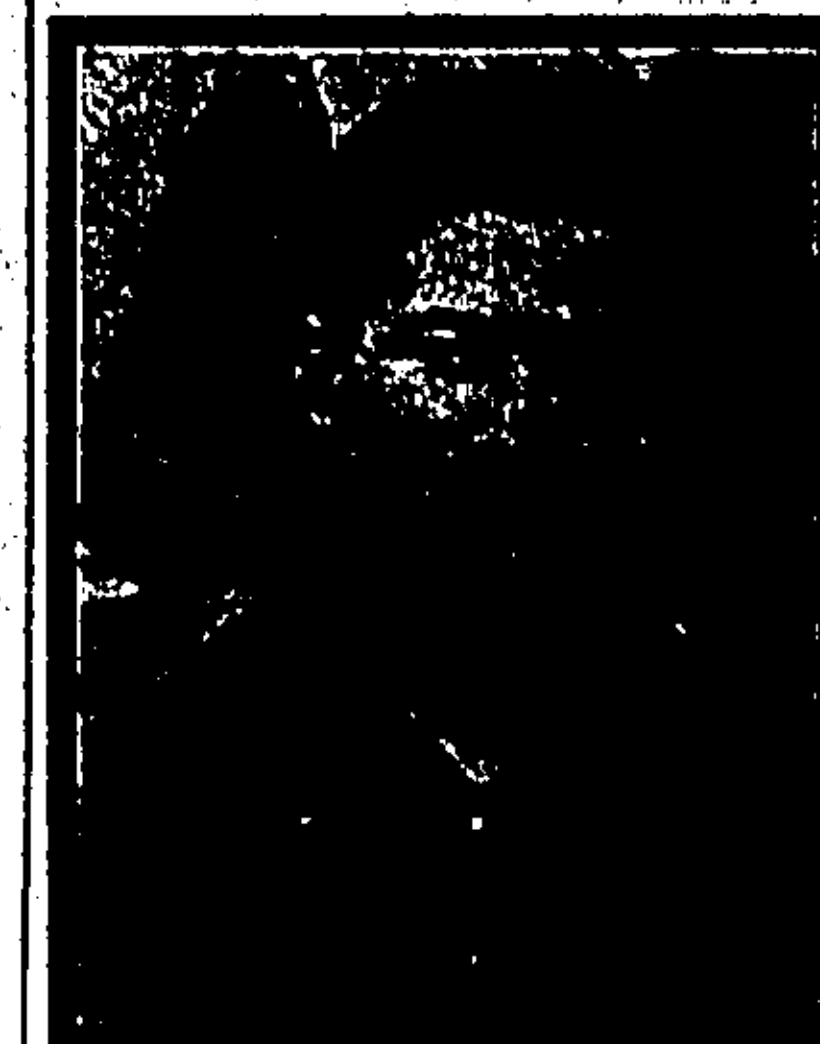

A penalty "bully", however, was given against Whites who was easily beaten in the bully-off by AWATAR SINGH who scored the first goal for Whites.

Kalwant Singh replied for Colours with a beautiful high shot, but Gurbachan had infringed a "second before" and the goal was disallowed.

AWATAR SINGH, however, levelled matters, just before half-time with a fast rising shot which had Moss well beaten.

Infringement of "sticks" was the result of a perfect goal by Gurbachan Singh early in the second half being disallowed, and AWATAR SINGH broke away at the other end to place Whites in the lead.

GURBACHAN SINGH levelled the scores shortly afterwards, and Whites then attacked dangerously, but Wong gave a brilliant exhibition of good judgement and clearing. Awatar Singh, Lt. Eaden and Lt. Donald yielded the goal-mouth in

A. M. RODRIGUES, who figured prominently at full-back in the Interport Hockey Trial yesterday, is skipper of the University cricket team. On Saturday he scored 85 in a premier league game against Craighengower.

Win Over Saints May Decide Title

FOURTH YEAR IN SUCCESSION

THE Hong Kong Ladies are now almost assured of carrying off the Caer Clark Hockey Cup for the fourth season in succession as the result of their win over St. Andrew's in the clash between two 100 per cent. teams on Saturday.

Led by a goal, scored by Miss M. Woolley, at the interval the champions won by goals scored by Miss J. Dalziel and Miss J. Churchill.

The C.B.A. were held to a draw as the result of a late goal by Miss P. McCaw of the "Y" Ladies after they had crossed over with a goal lead through Miss M. Whitley.

In the remaining game goals by Miss C. Botelho, Miss A. Alves, and Miss M. Remedios (2) gave the Recreio "A" an easy win over the C.B.S., who had beaten the Recreio "B" in a previous encounter.

though he worked very hard indeed. He, however, received little support from either flank.

Lt. Donald, Lt. Eaden and Awatar Singh kept play much to themselves, Lt. Bartlett and A. P. Sousa coming into the limelight only very occasionally.

Perkins did not prove an able leader for the fast Radio players, being decidedly slow.

Flincher proved himself to be quite the best of the left-wingers seen so far, and his combination with Kalwant was very neat and clever.

Mackay was given no support, and over-eagerness caused him to be "off side" on many occasions.

The following were the teams:

CLUB STILL MAINTAIN LEAD IN LEAGUE I

Vital Game Against The K. C. C.

UNIVERSITY FEEL ABSENCE OF E. L. GOSANO

ALTHOUGH checked by the Army on Saturday the Hong Kong Cricket Club are still in a very sound position in the race for the premier league championship, although their setback has placed the I.R.C. and the K.C.C. in a challenging position. The situation at the moment is as follows:

H.K.C.C.—Beat Craighengower, the Navy, the I.R.C. and drawn with the Army. Matches to play are against the K.C.C., the C.S.C.C., and the University.

I.R.C.—Beat the Navy and Craighengower, drawn with the K.C.C., and lost to the Club. Matches to play are against the Army, the University and the C.S.C.C.

K.C.C.—Beat the Navy and drawn with the Army and the I.R.C. Matches to play are against the Club, Craighengower, University and the C.S.C.C.

From the above it will clearly be seen that the championship will probably rest on the Club v K.C.C. game, which will be played at the H. K. C. C.

The University attack was very weak on Saturday in the absence of E. L. Gosano, but even with his presence in the side the champions are not a sufficiently balanced side to retain the title they so surprisingly won last season.

SOUTH CHINA AVENGE FORMER DEFEAT

POLICE OUT-WITTED

MISTAKE OF RESTING ON LAURELS

Saints Half Back
Trio Shine.

PILE'S COSTLY BLUNDER

(By OUTSIDE LEFT)

Led at one stage of the game by two goals to nil, St. Joseph's swept the Police off their feet a few minutes before the interval of their Senior Shield soccer encounter to draw level and then swept on to victory in the second half as the result of a neat goal by Beltrao.

On the whole the game was very poor, although flashes of brilliance from both sides flitted through the encounter. Particularly noticeable was the pretty short passing methods of the Police forwards and the neat combination on the right wing of the Saints' attack.

After the Police had twice beaten Marques, the Saints team was reshuffled. Beltrao replaced Elms at centre forward, while A. V. Gosano moved up from right back to the pivot position. Elms came in to the full back position vacated by Gosano.

These changes had a marked effect on St. Joseph's who soon after scored their first goal and followed it up with an equaliser a minute later.

Pile the selected Interport half back, made several mistakes in defence, one of which resulted in the Saints equalising. In the second half he failed to intercept a centre from B. Gosano, and as a result Beltrao netted the winning goal.

The Saints were early handicapped as a result of Ward sustaining a cut above his left eye, and this resulted in B. Gosano cutting in towards the Police goal whenever Costa sent in a high shot which Ward was unable to get his head to.

A. V. Gosano, Marques, and Elms were responsible for the Police defeat. This intermediate line repeatedly broke up promising Police movements.

The Rocha and Costa partnership proved a failure, though Rocha was really the one at fault, as he poached frequently to waste opportunities.

Costa, on the left, sent across some grand centres. He makes as good a winger as Sahban.

The Ward-Bertie Gosano wing was where the real danger lay, and it was their combined movements that was primarily responsible for the three goals.

Stephens, Brooks and T. Pile were the best of the Police forwards and time and again got through the Saints' defence only to fall badly in their shooting.

Individually, Stephens was the best forward on view, being responsible for some very pretty solo efforts, one of which would have found the net but for a brilliant full-length dive by Marques in goal.

The Saints played up to the Police mistakes, and as a result many Police movements were checked before they had gone very far.

The Police should never have relaxed after their two goals lead, but they did, and this combined with the Saints' efforts, resulted in the final score of 3 to 2 against them.

BORDERERS UNFORTUNATE AGAINST CLUB

Disallowed Goal In First Half.

FARROW'S GREAT PART IN DRAWN GAME

(By OUTSIDE LEFT)

THE Borderers were very unlucky not to register a win in their Second Round encounter against the Club in the Junior Shield competition on Saturday, a disallowed goal early in the first half culminating in a drawn game. The ball went right through a hole in the net, and a corner was given.

The Borderers were by far the superior team, and it was only the sterling defence of the Club in the latter stages of the game that frustrated them. The Club forwards never sent in a good shot at the Borderers' goal and Williams handled the ball on very rare occasions.

Herbert and Jenkins, the reserve back, played very well, breaking up all the Club attacks long before they reached the danger zone.

Court had G. Duncan too well marked for the latter to be at all dangerous, while Bell and Punccheon, on the right wing, were also bottled up by the splendid work of Jenkins and Whelan.

Rupert Baldwin, who made his debut this season, gave a very fine display and was the best of the Club forwards. He is a much better man than Sloan, for whom he substituted, and centres with deadly accuracy.

Williamson was dangerous on occasions, but he dabbled in dribbling to such an extent that whenever he was near the Borderers' goal he was robbed before he could do any harm.

All three of the Club halves played splendid games, and had it not been for them the Borderers would have easily entered the Semi-Final Round by a large margin.

To single out any individual half would be indeed hard, although I will say that Lowe played far above his usual form, affecting many a good clearance when the Club defence were hard pressed.

Gamble was splendid on the left wing. He plays better and better in every game. His complete blockade of the Johns and Pallister right wing formation in the second half was one of the features of the game.

McKellar, on the right flank, was also very good and was greatly in demand in the first half when the erratic display of R. Goldman saw the Borderers' forwards very nearly through. McKellar's bustling tactics and good spilling measures robbed them of an opening, time and again.

Boyd was easily the better of the two backs, but he was erratic in the second half, when a wild kick saw the Borderers equalise six minutes from time.

R. Goldman, who deputised for Manning Ralston, made a poor substitute and took a long time to settle down in the first half. He was never at ease, however, and time and again exposed his citadel to the opposing forwards through sheer carelessness. In the second half, however, he improved considerably, and rendered great assistance during a terrific Borderers' bombardment when it was thought the Borderers must score, but the backs, well supported by the halves, however, kept their charge safe.

Farrow in goal played his best game of the season, and gathered brilliantly on occasion. His only fault, a serious one, is that he is too slow in getting rid of the ball from a goal kick.

The Borderers' halves, Williams, Court and Whelan, gave a good display.

CLUB'S FINE WIN

S. STRANGE AND DUNCAN PROMINENT

Hocquard Bottled Up.
Throughout.

(By OUTSIDE LEFT)

THE Club created a sensation in the Senior Shield on Saturday when they played good football to defeat the Lincolns by the odd goal in three.

THE Club defence, S. Strange and A. Duncan in particular, played a wonderful game in the second half, and undoubtedly saved the day for their side.

DUNCAN was outstanding for the manner in which he bottled up Hocquard, and the Lincolns' wingers seldom had a clear run.

THE Bickford-E. Strange wing proved the most dangerous, although Hill and Fowler were very good.

THE winning goal was the result of Fowler's work, and the Club winger played a really good game. Howe scored it, it is true, but he should have scored at least two other goals.

ON one occasion, when only a few yards from goal, and with only the goal keeper to beat, he fired the ball high over the bar.

RIDLEY, as usual, played well for the losers, and together with Hocquard, was responsible for many promising attacks.

MCGUINNESS worked hard, and with just a little bit of luck, would have played of bustling tactics combined with brilliant ground passes to the right and left wingers.

Of the Borderers' forwards Johns, on the right wing, was very dangerous, and sent over some lovely centres. Although well shadowed in the second by Gamble, he got through twice and proved very dangerous.

Pallister, Morris and Marsh field were the three best forwards on view and should have got through on more occasions than they did.

Morris was very dangerous in the last minutes, but he was time and again charged off the ball as he was about to shoot.

Searle was the better of the two wingers, and enjoyed many clear runs in the first half. His centres were, however, snapped up by Boyd and McKellar, both of whom covered Goldman well.

It is a mystery to many why so few times was not played after the score had been levelled and full time called for. Possibly the Borderers may appear against the goal displaced them in the first half.

THE remainder of the defence proved no obstacle to the scheming Artillery forwards, and Hopkins was ever on the move.

ARTILLERY BEATEN DECISIVELY

PAU AND YEUNG PROVE BIG DANGER

LOSERS' HALVES TOO FAR BACK

(BY SPOT KICK)

AT CAROLINE HILL YESTERDAY SOUTH CHINA MADE CERTAIN THAT THERE WOULD BE NO REPETITION OF LAST WEEK'S SURPRISE DEFEAT IN THEIR RETURN PREMIER LEAGUE SOCCER FIXTURE WITH THE ARTILLERY EMERGING VICTORS FROM THE ENCOUNTER BY TWO CLEAR GOALS TO DISPLACE THE NAVY IN THE THIRD POSITION IN THE TABLE.

THE GAME COMMENCED AT A FAST PACE, AND THE OPENING EXCHANGES WERE VERY LIVELY, EACH TEAM ATTACKING IN TURN WITH SOUTH CHINA SUPERIOR IN THEIR APPROACH WORK. THE GUNNERS' DEFENCE PLAYED IN AN UNUSUAL FORMATION, THE HALVES LYING WELL BACK ON THE WINGS, WHILE THE BACKS WERE OFTEN TACKLING NEAR THE HALF-WAY LINE.

Pau Ka-ping, who appeared at inside right for the winners, was a bagful of tricks, making many good openings for Yeung on the right wing. It was this wing that enjoyed the majority of the play throughout the game, Tay Quee-liang on the opposite wing seldom receiving the ball, especially during the first half.

Tam Kong-pak, while playing well with Fung King cheong, neglected his other partner and seldom passed the ball to Tay.

The halves were very safe. Leung Wing-chui, especially, tackling well and distributing the ball with great accuracy.

The backs played a sound game on the whole, but Lau Mau made a couple of bad misses, which, had Snooks been a shade faster, would have proved very costly.

Wong had little to do in goal, but cleared confidently when necessary. After South China had netted twice, the Artillery made several positional changes. Allen reverting to his usual position at full-back, Greenfields going to the inside right position, and Birmingham moving over to the centre.

These changes not only strengthened the defence, but considerably improved the forward line, and there were many good movements, but with a two-goals lead, South China's defence cleared confidently.

Allen played much better at back than he did in the centre, while Wroe cleared well under heavy pressure. The halves were good, but concentrated too much on defence, and when their forwards did get away they could not give them the necessary support. The forwards tried hard, but could not penetrate, although towards the end of the game several good shots were sent in.

South China's opening goal came very unexpectedly, for the Artillery were attacking strongly at the time. Suddenly the ball was cleared with a hefty kick, and TAM KONG PAK obtained possession on the half-way line. Striking away with Worthington in hot pursuit, Tam fired in a hard drive from the edge of the penalty area, which had Combey beaten all the way. He dived for the ball, which, however, passed him to strike the foot of the upright and rebound across the goal line and then enter the net off the recumbent Combey's head!

A few minutes later South China went further ahead through PAU KA PING, who netted with a fast shot following a right wing movement in which Yeung Shui-yick played a big part.

Having obtained a two-goals lead, South China were content to rest on their laurels, and play deteriorated to a great extent. No further score was added before the interval, and the second half produced some very poor play. The gunners tried hard to get on terms, and Snooks had a good shot saved by Wong. Greenfields and Woods both went close with good efforts, but the final whistle went with no further score.

South China—Wong Wing; Li Tin-sing, Lau Mau; Leung In-eh, Leung Wing-chui, Lee Kwok-wai; Yeung Shui-yick, Pau Ka-ping, Fung King-cheong, Tam Kong-pak and Tay Quee-liang.

Artillery—Combey, Greenfields, Wroe, Worthington, Rodgers, Harris, Snooks, Birmingham, Allen, Woods and Seal.

A TRIBUTE TO BRITISH DEMOCRACY

United Front That Saves Nation.

HUNGARIAN EX-PREMIER'S
STATEMENT

Budapest.

An eloquent tribute to the success of British democracy is paid by Count Bethlen, the former Prime Minister now on a visit to England, in a statement he has made to the Hungarian press.

Whilst in other countries democracy, unable to solve the difficult problems of these times, either gave way to other forms of government or simply shelved the problems, English democracy proved itself equal to the occasion, he said.

Eliminating all party differences, it created a united front in order to save the nation from a difficult situation.

National unity, expressed in harmonious and fruitful collaboration between Government and Parliament, produced such unmistakable symptoms of economic and financial consolidation as the balancing of the Budget, the increase of State revenues, a high and unassailable State credit, the unassailable purchasing power of the pound, a rapid decrease of unemployment, the increase of production and export, the outward signs of prosperity, a relatively high and stable standard of life, the increase in the savings of small investors, the healthy distribution of income and property, political and social quiet, the equilibrium of social classes and the cohesion of the Empire.

Thanks to this wonderful progress towards consolidation and to her complete disinterestedness in the differences of other nations, Britain was, he added, to play a leading part in the European concert and could use her undoubtedly very great influence for the purposes of mediation and even arbitration.—Reuter.

Engineering and Building

London's Latest Luxury Hotel

The "Cumberland."

AIR-CONDITIONED AND NOISELESS

In the design and lay-out of the Cumberland Hotel, which occupies an island site of 70,000 sq. ft. at the Marble Arch, London, W.1., the comfort and well-being of the guests constituted the first consideration. The hotel, which was opened to the public on December 12, comprises 1,000 bedrooms, each with its own bathroom, toilet and hall.

The absence of bells, double walls, floors raised above their concrete bases, and the fact that the great bulk of the ventilation and other machinery is placed away from the hotel in an annexe, makes the building as noiseless as it is possible to do.

The heating and ventilation arrangements are excellent; the occupant of each bedroom can control its temperature by simply moving a valve lever to "full heat" (70 deg. F.); "half-heat" (55 deg. C.); or "heat-off."

The air entering the building is passed through an air washer, dehumidifier and filter. After this, it is cooled in summer by means of refrigerators, and in the winter it is warmed by banks of heaters.

The public rooms, bedrooms and kitchens are all ventilated without causing draughts, 54 large fans being employed in moving 2,000 tons of air every hour. In the public rooms the air is changed every four or five minutes, and concealed smoke extractors draw away tobacco smoke and ensure a clear wholesome atmosphere.

In the course of his speech at the inaugural luncheon, held on December 11, Sir Isidore Salmon stated that between 5,000 and 6,000 workers had been employed during the building operations, and that the hotel now gave permanent employment to 2,000 persons. A garage capable of accommodating 500 cars was being built in close proximity, and would be ready in three or four months.

Lord Camrose of Long Cross, who also spoke, congratulated the directors of Messrs. Cumberland Hotels, Limited, on the manner in which their enterprise had been brought to fruition.—Engineering.

SLUM CLEARANCE IN LONDON

$35,000,000 Scheme.

SEMI-SKYSCRAPERS FOR REHOUSING

Speaking of the $35,000,000 scheme of slum clearance in the London area Mr. H. R. Salley, M.P., Chairman of the L. C. C. Housing Committee, says:—

"At present these slum areas are so overcrowded that with normal re-building you can in cases of clearance rehouse no more than about 50 per cent. of the people displaced. "By building up to ten storeys we have estimated that we can rehouse 80 per cent. on the same spot. In all areas there is a certain proportion who are not tied to the spot by their work, and these are the people who will have to find new homes, probably in our estates on the fringe of London."

Lift Tower. "These blocks of flats will be of a semi-skyscraper type. They will have closed-in the roofs where children can play in safety, and in the centre of each quadrangle formed by four blocks there will be a lift tower with galleries linked to each block. These galleries will communicate with, say, the sixth floor, so that no dweller will have more than four stairs to climb. The lifts will be automatic, but in charge of a liftman."

"Under our ten-year programme we are demolishing 26,000 houses, and to accommodate the 260,000 persons displaced shall have to build 85,000 houses or flats."

"In the East End we are aiming at a type of flat which will be within the limit of rent that can be paid there. For 9s. we hope to be able to provide three rooms with scullery and either sold or shared bathroom."

WORKMEN'S FLATS IN LONDON

Providing For 4,000
At Wandsworth.

3 ROOMS AND KITCHEN
AT 10s. A WEEK

A report of the Borough Council to the Wandsworth Housing Committee states:—

"We are very much concerned with the urgency of supplying accommodation for persons and families who cannot afford the rents of existing properties."

"The committee, therefore, propose in schemes now under consideration to provide flats with two habitable rooms and kitchen at a net rent of 6s. a week, which with rates would mean an inclusive rent of approximately 8s.; flats with three habitable rooms and kitchen at a net rent of 7s. 6d. a week, which with rates should not exceed 10s. inclusive, and larger flats in proportion."

The clearance of areas which the committee propose to recommend the Council to declare will, it is stated, provide rehousing accommodation for 4,000 persons. In addition the committee are preparing schemes for the accommodation of another 4,000 persons living in overcrowded conditions.

ARCHITECTS OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

London Scheme To Provide Work.

A scheme to provide work for unemployed architects has been developed in London under the sponsorship of the Royal Institute of British Architects.

This has been in co-operation with the London society and the London Survey Committee and the men are measuring up the lesser known examples of good architecture.

The work of each individual is confined largely to the locality in which he lives and material thus obtained will provide a source of exhaustive information to those interested in the city's future development.

Britain And Peace.

To talk of reversion to the "old diplomacy" in face of failure of the new, just because round-table discussions at Geneva have given place to talks between Ambassadors, is unreal. The French, with their unfailing clear-sightedness, have stressed the essential difference between the influence of the old Britain and that of Britain to-day. Let us have pacts or treaties by all means, they say in effect, but what is to support them in emergency? What is the value, they say, of British treaty support against an aggressor under the Locarno Pact, or any other pact, if the British people (like the American) mean to tolerate no "foreign entanglements"? Germany signified her light regard of any commitments when she abruptly left the Disarmament Conference and the League. After that, says France, who will trust Germany to keep any treaty (especially with the 1914 invasion of Belgium in mind)—even the pact which Hitler offers now? The British Government is working for a Franco-German treaty of mutual non-aggression, from which it believes an armaments settlement is attainable. France offers to agree to any armament scheme provided it be backed with a pledge from Britain (as a third party) that her whole force will instantly be thrown against either of the others manifesting itself an aggressor. No other guarantee will serve the French. And who shall blame them for holding such a view? Germany declares that the Versailles Treaty obliges the victor Powers also to disarm, and insists upon the establishment of her equal rights as recognised last December. To each of these representations the French answer that the undertaking was given to a pre-Hitler Germany. "The poker-game of reciprocal hypocrisies, culled the Disarmament Conference, came to a sensationally abrupt termination," writes Mr. Britten Austin in the "Nineteenth Century." "Germany suddenly stood up and overturned the table." The question whether Germany's abandonment of the League—and only upon her entry into it did the Locarno pact come into force—has rendered the pact null and void does not much trouble France. Britain may stand to her signature, as Mr. Baldwin lately said; but will the British Government ask Parliament to pledge Britain to come automatically to France's side against any new German aggression? Would not their interests be common in such event? Britain has already conceded to France that secret German rearming, being defiance of the Peace Treaty, will be construed as aggression. In France to-day there is not the slightest doubt that as soon as Germany is ready she will attack France again. Hitler's assurances about not wanting war, says Paris, are sincere enough to-day. Germany is not yet ready. But the only hope of preserving peace, it is insisted, is that Germany shall be dissuaded from her present planned course by an unequivocal declaration of guarantee by Britain. It is supported in emphatic terms by Mr. Wickham Steed in the "Fortnightly Review", by Mr. Austin in his monthly article in the "Nineteenth Century", and by the foreign editor of the "Contemporary Review." As for the pact now proposed by Hitler, France demands to know whether the Nazi storm-troops, virtually a trained standing army and numbering 1,000,000 men, are to be disbanded under Germany's offer to reduce the professional Reichswehr army to a short-service militia of 300,000 men. But all such questions, seemingly by way of pleadings to establish an issue, are away from the real French point—the absence of any guarantee from Britain to enforce any peace agreement with a strong right arm if needed. Britain's announced determination to do so, declare the French, would assure peace. Failing that, France will make every preparation possible for a calamity she regards as inevitable. The French General Staff believe that Germany plans to invade France next time by way of the plains of north-western Switzerland; not by Belgium, because violation of Belgium awakens Britain against Germany in 1914. The years 1935-39 are critical years with the French army because of shortage of man-power in reflection from the war years. And in 1935 under the Peace Treaty a plebiscite must be taken in the Saar district to decide whether it shall be merged in France or Germany. The Nazis have already begun preparing there for that plebiscite. France points to this uneasy immediate future, and also to the secret rearmament by Germany in the past, now coming to be admitted by observers in Britain too. Her appeal may be stated in Mr. Wickham Steed's words: "It is my firm belief, based upon some 40 years of experience and observation, that nothing short of a firm and clear-sighted British policy, publicly proclaimed in unmistakable terms, can now save Europe from drifting towards a late war, which it is our highest interest to prevent."

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

In Zanzibar
Almost every month the official "Board of Trade Journal" contains figures showing up some aspect or other of the Congo Basin treaties. Under these Britain is prevented from giving preference to British goods over a large area of British territory in Africa.
Zanzibar comes into the picture in the latest issue of the "Journal." Compared with the first nine months of last year, our exports of cotton piece-goods of the island from 1,700,000 yards to 800,000 yards, or 50 per cent.
At the same time the Japanese exports rose from 1,700,000 yards to nearly 2,000,000 yards.
In artificial silk Japan this year supplied 295,500 yards out of a total importation of 295,800.

Trouble In Syria

France is finding it more difficult to terminate her mandatory regime in Syria than Great Britain did in Iraq.
Her High Commissioner has just had to withdraw the treaty which provided for Syria's entry into the League of Nations in four years' time. Nationalist opposition was such that ratification was impossible.
Syria is a harder country to administer than Iraq because of its diversity of races and religion.
And even Iraq consented to sign her original treaty with Great Britain only at the eleventh hour and under considerable pressure.
The French have made the same discovery that a Roman soldier made in Syria two thousand years ago. He inscribed on a stone the words: "The Syrians are a rotten crowd."

SPORT SEEN AS A PROFESSION

"CLASS IDEAS MUST DISAPPEAR"

WHERE ENGLAND AND AMERICA DIFFER.

(By Lieut.-Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, M.P.)

[Lieut.-Col. Moore-Brabazon, Pioneer Airman, is holder of No. 1 Royal Aero Club certificate. He won the "Daily Mail" £1,000 prize for a circular mile flight in 1909. He is a famous golfer, yachtsman, motorist and photographer. He also has a reputation as an after-dinner speaker. He has written this article not only as a sportsman but as the father of two sons.]

What is your opinion on the idea that professionalism in athletic sports is a legitimate career now for the ordinary boy, irrespective of what class he may belong to in life? That is a question which, in these days of economic stress and parental doubt, I am asked increasingly often.

I am definitely in favour of those boys who have a flair for certain games adopting those games as a profession if they think that by doing so they will achieve success and final happiness.

Of course, the ideal amateur is one who, excelling at games, plays genuinely in his spare time, and who has other interests in life which will later more exclusively occupy his attention. For him to turn professional would be wrong.

But there is to-day a large number of boys who have no great alternative drive towards progress in other walks of life, and who are yet stopped from adopting a career which normally would be one of pleasure and profit for themselves—stopped, I may add, by nothing but a snobbish tradition. I believe that all such ideas have now to go by the board: there is no valid reason for their continued existence.

Let us take footballers and cricketers for a start. I do not think that in these sports very great or lucrative openings occur; the competition and the prospects held out are not such as to warrant devoting one's life to either game, and Nature, in any case, especially in football, does not give one many effective years.

Social Status Of "Pro's"

I will not say that a good deal of reform is not needed in these special branches of sport, nor will I here succumb to the temptation to speak my mind about how a first-class footballer is treated—of those instances in which a man, being able to draw immense crowds, gets no extra reward—for that is another story.

But in other directions, if to play the game in which you excel takes all your time, then it is your life's work, and I cannot see what is wrong in making it also your profession.

The American golfers have shown us what an astonishingly happy and prosperous life that of a professional golfer can be, and, although I bow to no one in my admiration for the English professionals, and my high opinion of them is unqualified in any way, yet it is the Americans who have shown how to "cash in" on their prowess both monetarily and socially.

It has, in fact, been a remarkable revelation in recent years to observe the social status attained by the American professional.

The American golfers have shown us what an astonishingly happy and prosperous life that of a professional golfer can be, and, although I bow to no one in my admiration for the English professionals, and my high opinion of them is unqualified in any way, yet it is the Americans who have shown how to "cash in" on their prowess both monetarily and socially.

It has, in fact, been a remarkable revelation in recent years to observe the social status attained by the American professional.

There are some amateurs in our own ranks to-day whose whole life is golf and nothing but golf. That being so, what is wrong in their competing regularly against those whose life is golf also—namely, professionals—rather than against amateurs, whose outlook on the game really should be that it is not their life-work at all but is complementary to their ordinary activities?

Tennis is another department of sport in which I cannot see why the great drawing power of the public given to amateurs should not be extended to professional players. Hitherto many amateurs have been nervous to play as professionals, chiefly because, in this case, there is no existing organisation and no gate—a state of affairs which must and will change. That every tennis player in the world should travel miles and compete for cups and still more cups (of which they possess already an abundance) simply to swell the income of a tennis organisation is absurd.

Folly Of Amateurs

A labourer is worthy of his hire, and that the great experts, whose life is tennis, do not make money out of their prowess is to me sheer folly. Indeed, I feel that the man who pays to see an exhibition of play or a keen competition would feel happier if part of that money benefited the men who were giving him his excitement and pleasure.

In my time there was among the boxing amateurs one of the most outstanding heavy-weights of his day, namely, John Hopley, a distinguished Hallowian. Many of us thought that he could have been world's champion at a time when world's champions were really distinguished performers in the ring. But he never would turn professional boxer. I think that in declining to do so he did a disservice to the professional ranks as a whole, for had he turned professional, his action would undoubtedly have raised the status of professionalism several degrees.

It is from precisely this point of view that I think the subject should be fairly considered. The professional should not be jealous of the entry into his preserves of men from every walk of life; he should welcome them, for by such an influx the whole standing of any professional sport would undeniably benefit. No advantages would be asked for or conceded, once the choice had been made. Each newcomer would have to fight step by step to reach the top, and although the climb might be more difficult and the concentration required more intense than in almost any other calling, the adventure would be found no less pleasant and rivals no less genuine sportsmen by virtue of the fact that they were making their livelihood out of the sports at which they excel.

CATERER SUES FOR $200.

Johannesburg.
Dis honoured cheques and LOU's with a face value of £3,000 are held by the one-time directors of the defunct Embassy Club Company (Proprietary), Limited.

They represent loans made to members for gambling purposes when the Club was at the height of its popularity, before the anti-gambling legislation.

Attempts have been made to collect these debts but they were unsuccessful.
These facts were disclosed to Mr. Guy Preston in Johannesburg Civil Court during the hearing of evidence in the case in which the caterer Hubert van Diegenen, is suing the Embassy Club Company (Proprietary), Limited, for £200, alleged to be owing to him on one-year's contract which was terminated by the company when it still had four months to run.

Lieut. Jacobs, a founder of the Club, said £3,000 worth of promissory notes represented the sole assets of the company. Jacobs said if the anti-gambling legislation had not been passed the Club would have carried on.

Gambling tables which had cost £50 or £60 each had been sold by auction. They were knocked down to the highest bidder at 41 each. Judgment was reserved.—Ruter.

NAZI PLAN FOR AUSTRIA

Herr Habicht Mentioned For Chancellery.

DOLLFUSS' DISPLACEMENT EXPECTED SHORTLY

London. Herr Adolf Hitler's plans for Austria are the subject of messages received here to-day from Berlin.

It is stated that, as soon as Austria has been brought under the Nazi banner, Herr Habicht, who has directed wireless propaganda in the country and who is sometimes called Herr Hitler's "Inspector for Australia," will be appointed its first Nazi Chancellor.

This plan naturally cannot be carried into effect until Dr. Engelbert Dollfuss, the present Chancellor of Austria, who is one of the strongest opponents of the Nazis in Europe, is removed from power. Both the German and Austrian Nazis, however, expect his displacement to occur before very long.

A significant coincidence is the publication, at Geneva, of a report that the Saar Governing Commission recently seized documents disclosing that an elaborate Nazi organization had been operating by continual secret terrorism and boycotts, to undermine the Saar Government.

Part of the plan, it is stated, was to flood Austria with Nazi agents from the Saar who, coming from there, would have no difficulty in procuring passports.

In connection with these efforts, it is noteworthy that Soviet Russia has lately been endeavouring to form a so-called Baltic security league against German expansion. It is believed that Russia is particularly anxious to secure her western frontier, in view of her fears of the possibility of another war with Japan.—Reuter.

BOY KILLED IN PICKING UP PAMPHLET

Fatality Mars Safety First Campaign.

RUN OVER BY LORRY

A small boy named Lai Kun-chuen, aged six, was killed this morning in Connaught Road West, about 9.10, while trying to pick up one of the Safety First pamphlets which were dropped over the city from an aeroplane this morning.

Seeing the papers being showered down from the sky he ran across the road in front of lorry No. 3495 driven by Sun Kan, who was unable to pull up in time, and was killed instantly.

The boy is stated to have only recently arrived from a village in Sekki, Chinese Territory.

The body was taken to the Public Mortuary.

An aeroplane belonging to the Far Eastern Aviation Company, from the Kai Tak Aerodrome, flew over the Colony this morning and distributed pamphlets in connection with the Safety First Campaign which started to-day and will extend for a fortnight.

AVOIDING STREET ACCIDENTS.

Fortnight's "Safety First" Campaign.

RULES FOR MOTORISTS AND PEDESTRIANS

It is hoped that, with the support of the public in the Safety First Campaign, which opens to-day, and is to continue for a fortnight, many avoidable accidents may be prevented in the future.

The object of the campaign is primarily to impress on pedestrians the importance of walking on the pavements instead of in the roads and also to instil in the minds of drivers of all vehicles the importance of care and attention when driving and obedience to traffic regulations.

The public can give valuable assistance by themselves adhering strictly to traffic regulations and by instructing their children and servants to do likewise, and, for motorists, by affixing to the wind-screens (on the left hand side) Safety First posters specially printed for this purpose. Such posters will be distributed by the Automobile Association on car parks where the Association has control and by Traffic Police to garages and to any one applying for them.

Three Separate Towns Claimed.

RETURNED BANISHEE'S TRIAL ADJOURNED

The question of a man's place of birth was responsible for the adjournment of the trial of Kwok Ping, who pleaded not guilty to a breach of the Deportation Ordinance when charged before the Puisse Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor appeared for the Crown, the accused being unrepresented.

The following jury were empanelled: Messrs. D. J. Fraser (foreman), A. W. H. Edie, Tang Chi-man, Lee Chung-cha, T. M. Mitchell, J. F. Shea and A. E. Simmons.

The accused was charged with being in the Colony on December 20 last year after having been banished for 10 years on August 4, 1923.

The prisoner stated that he was born in Hong Kong. He had two relatives in the Colony who could give information as to the whereabouts of an aunt who could prove that he was born here and not in Bangkok, Siam, as the Police stated.

Cross-examined by Mr. Whyte-Smith, defendant said that he was frightened by the Police into admitting that he was born in Bangkok.

Mr. Whyte-Smith: Is it not true that when you were brought up for banishment your father stated that you were born in Swatow?

Accused: Yes, that is so, but only because I refused to give him money.

His Lordship adjourned the hearing for one week until January 29 to enable defendant to produce his witnesses.

Silver Triumph

The ratification of the world silver pact by President Roosevelt, providing for the remonetization of silver, with the price pegged at 64.5 cents an ounce, is a personal triumph for Senator Key Pittman (above) of Nevada, long a silver champion, who proposed the silver agreement at the London Economic Conference last Summer.

INDIAN CONSTABLE ON GRAVE CHARGE

Chinese Boy's Fatal Injuries.

MANSLAUGHTER ALLEGED AGAINST SIKH P.C.

Charged with the manslaughter of a Chinese boy named Sin Chun, a hawker of cat-fish, Kartar Singh, an Indian constable of the Hong Kong Police, this morning pleaded not guilty when he came before the Acting Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood, at the Criminal Sessions.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, prosecuted while Mr. Duncan McNeill, instructed by Mr. M. R. Mackinlay of Messrs. Deacons, appeared for the defendant.

The jury was composed of Messrs. W. Anderson (foreman), A. Williamson, P. K. Pavri, J. P. Whitman, H. A. de Figueiredo, R. J. Shrigley, G. Van Wylick.

Opening the case for the Crown, Mr. Fraser said that on November 14 of last year, between 8 a.m. and 8.30 a.m. the defendant was on duty at the Shamshupo Market when he saw four Chinese boy hawkers selling cat-fish. All but one, the deceased, ran away, but the constable caught Sin Chun and struck him on the right side. The boy broke away and said something in Chinese, on which the constable again caught and slapped him.

The deceased later returned to the market, where went to a disused stall and lay down. At the time he was alleged to have stated to a friend that he felt ill.

At about 3 p.m. that same afternoon he was found in a collapsed condition in the disused stall and his friends were informed. They made a report to the European Inspector at Shamshupo Police Station and Sin Chun was finally, at about 5 p.m., taken by ambulance to the Kowloon Hospital, where a diagnosis which later proved to be correct, pointed to internal haemorrhage from a ruptured spleen and general peritonitis.

Deceased was immediately operated on but after three weeks in hospital he succumbed on December 1.

Counsel said the jury had to decide, firstly, whether the blow given the boy was the cause of his death, and, secondly, whether the accused struck that blow.

The trial is proceeding.

HOSPITAL THIEF SENTENCED.

One Month's Gaol For Unemployed Man.

Arrested in a pawnshop on Saturday, Lai San, unemployed, admitted the theft of four pieces of cloth, three pillow cases, one bolster case and a tablecloth from the Tung Wah Hospital.

Inspector Carey stated that the accused walked into the Hospital and stole the articles from a suit case.

Mr. Balfour imposed a sentence of one month's hard labour.

To-day's Short Story.

BRAVADO

By Jenetta Botibol.

"LET us go home now, Igor," Sasha said, pulling timidly at his elder brother's sleeve, "I am very tired."

Igor did not appear to have heard, and Sasha sat back in his corner, waiting to repeat his request in a few minutes. It was late, and his first taste of real, grown-up excitement had worn him out, and now he longed for his bed. Going home only meant climbing the stairs and walking a few yards down the street, but it did not occur to Sasha to go alone.

No one in Gorodok dared to walk alone in the streets at night, especially in winter. You never knew whom or what you might meet in that impenetrable darkness. You might run into old Petrov, the idiot, who was supposed to be harmless, but whose weird cries chilled the blood in your veins. Or you might see the ghost of long-dead Nikolai, carrying his head in his hands. No, Sasha did not think of going alone.

The others, sitting close together within the circle of dim lamplight, were intent on their gambling. Sasha had been allowed to play for the first time to-night, and he had lost what little money he'd had, but Igor was winning, and that was why he would not come home.

Every Saturday evening, when the work for the week was done, the boys met here in Ivan's cellar to play cards. It was the only amusement possible for them, since the tiny, isolated village had none to offer to boys of their age. For a few hours each week they forgot the cold, their poverty, and the toiling that led nowhere, and grew warmly alive with excitement.

LOCAL NEWS BREVITIES

The annual meeting of the Girl Guides will be held on Friday next at the Sandilands Hut, at 10.30 a.m.

A fine of $30, in default one month's hard labour, was imposed by Mr. Balfour at the Central Police Court this morning on Chan Cheung, a coolie, for stealing 84 cabbages or oranges from a hawk.

Chan Cha, unemployed, was sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for stealing an iron shackle from a local pier. A previous conviction was proved against the prisoner.

JURYMAN FAILS TO ATTEND.

Forgetfulness Costs Absentee $20.

Mr. Razee Nazarin, an assistant of Messrs. Harry Wicking and Co., was this morning fined $20 by the Puisse Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, for failure to attend jury service.

Mr. Nazarin admitted being served with a jury notice but said that he was so busy this morning that he forgot all about his duty. He apologized for the inconvenience caused.

His Lordship said that the result of this forgetfulness was that another man's valuable time had been taken up. The lapse of memory would cost him $20.

STONE-BREAKERS IN SERIOUS FIGHT.

One Man In Critical Condition.

A stone-breaker, Lam Sek Hung, was seriously injured in a fight which took place on the hillside at Whitfield yesterday and was removed to the Government Civil Hospital in a critical condition.

Two other stone-breakers, Chun Kun and Tsui Li, were charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Police Court this morning with assaulting Lam Sek Hung.

On the application of Sub-Inspector Rodger, who stated that the injured man was suffering from a ruptured spleen, the defendants were remanded in police custody for 48 hours.

Only on Saturday nights they had time and money for pleasure. The cards they used were grey and ragged from much handling.

Again Sasha asked his brother to come home.

"I will come soon," answered Igor.

"What, you are tired, Sasha? We do not stop yet," said Boris, the philosopher, who was losing as usual, and still hoping to regain some of the money he had lost.

"No, if you wish to go home, you can go by yourself," put in dark, wild Ivan, who was winning. He played a card, and exclaimed triumphantly, "Ha! I knew my luck would not desert me."

"Sasha could not go alone," Boris said. "Remember that he is the youngest of us. And remember, too, not to boast of your luck, Ivan."

"My luck will hold. But Sasha should not be afraid, even if he is young."

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be "The Guy," by Francis Marlowe.

"He has to pass old Petrov's house—I should not care to do it myself, at night."

"Pouff!" said Ivan with disgust. "I would not think twice about that. I am afraid of nothing."

The others were quiet, but exchanged glances. Ivan was the greatest boaster in the village, and was never tired of talking about himself, extolling his own virtues. But he was also very proud, and he always fulfilled his boasts, no matter at what cost.

"We know that you are brave," said Igor, resenting the slight to his brother, "but there are things that even you would not do."

"You lie! You cannot name one—there is nothing I would not do. I would not be afraid to call at Petrov's house and speak to him. Why, I would even go alone to the old graveyard!"

The boys laughed at that boast, but uneasily. Ivan was fearless, certainly, but foolish and rash.

"No, I don't think you would do that," Boris said quietly. Ivan jumped up in a rage. "You say I am a coward? You think there is anything I fear? Very well, I will show you. To-night I will go there, and you will see that nothing frightens me."

They laughed at him and tried to dissuade him, but only succeeded in making him the more determined to do as he had said. He put on his long coat and his fur cap, and started to mount the stairs.

"How shall we know that you have been there?" Boris asked him in a joke. "You may only walk round the market-place for a time and then return to us."

Ivan came back, furious that they should doubt him. He took up a stick with a sharp iron point. "I will plant this stick on a grave," he said, "and to-morrow you may all go and see it for yourselves. Will that be proof enough?"

They agreed that it would indeed be proof, and Ivan mounted the stairs and disappeared from their sight.

Outside, the world was covered with snow, and you could see no more in Gorodok than if you were blindfolded. There were no lamps in the street, and the houses were all shuttered, not a chink of light escaping anywhere. The intense cold made Ivan catch his breath.

But could not deter him. Grasping his stick, he strode off. He was not afraid, not he. He could fight a man or a wolf, so why should a ghost scare him if he met one?

When he reached the end of the village he was somewhat less pleased with himself. There was but little sense in marching through the snow, in total darkness, when he might be warm and secure with the others. But he had said he'd do it, and he must go on now, or be laughed at for ever. He went through what he knew to be wide, trackless fields, under a hovering of unblinking whiteness. The most sinister silence surrounded him; he did not even have the comfort of the sound of his own footfall.

Braving Neptune's Wrath on Errand of Mercy

A stirring sidelight on the recent storm that ravaged the coast of England is provided by this thrilling rescue scene at Cromer. A lifeboat is attempting to reach a Thames River barge that is being pummeled by heavy seas, while the crew of the beleaguered vessel cling to the rigging.

The old graveyard lay three miles away. It had been disused for many years, and had fallen into a state of neglect. The wooden fence that surrounded it had broken down in places, and sometimes in the summer a cow would find its way inside, and wander browsing among the simple tombstones and the crosses of wood which time had caused to decay and slip askew.

In Gorodok the place had an evil reputation—perhaps because no one now living could remember who lay buried there—and it was said to be haunted by the spirits of the forgotten dead. Even by day the peasants would make a wide detour to avoid it, or if they must pass it, they hurried by, crossing themselves and muttering a prayer.

It is difficult to know the moment in which Fear makes its onslaught felt, because it can be so slow and insidious in attacking. In its subtlety it can use the most harmless objects to attain its ends, and the mind, once touched by panic, readily becomes its ally, thus aiding its own undoing.

When Ivan reached the wood through which he must go, his courage was no longer as high as it had been when he had made his boat in the cellar, but he was not then afraid. The silence sang in his ears, and the trees, heavy with snow, looked menacing and unfamiliar in the dark, but he knew the way, and was still master of himself, so that he could force himself to see the trees as trees, and nothing more. The very need of this control betokened the creeping terror's touch.

Then, suddenly, he began to run because he longed to regain open country, and perhaps it was then that he was first aware of his own capability of knowing Fear. He stumbled over a fallen tree, half buried in snow, and had difficulty in keeping back a cry. He ran still faster, and floundered into a snow-drift, from which he had trouble in extricating himself.

Once out in the open again, the path led through vast, empty country, inhabited only by birds and animals, and this part of the journey was far worse than the wood. The cold seemed to grip him and squeeze the courage out of him. But pride and will power kept him to his purpose. If he turned back now, even the young Sasha would have power to taunt him. It was unthinkable.

At last he felt himself ascending a steep hill, and he knew he had only half a mile further to go. When he reached the old cemetery, all he need do would be to find a gap in the fence, plant his stick, and return to the village as quickly as he could. He would be known as the bravest man in Gorodok, the only one who would dare to visit this place alone on a winter night!

Panting, he reached the top of the hill and hurried down. The darkness seemed to have thinned slightly, and he could make out the shapes of the tall pines that ringed the grave yard, and the huddled ruin of the ancient church which had once served the village. The wind called sadly among the branches of the trees.

Ivan found a gap through which to climb quite easily, and he stood inside, trembling a little, feeling the desolation of the place. The graves, mere mounds of whiteness dimly perceived, were a few yards from him, their stones and crosses veiled in shrouds of snow. He looked about him, noting well the spot at which he had entered, in case he should lose his direction within. He experienced such a dreadful sense of revulsion that he longed to fly from the scene, his very flesh shrinking back in disgust.

An owl's call from the ruin sent him nearly petrified with fear, and for a moment he was unable to move. He pulled himself together, saying that it was the usual association of ideas that made him nervous to be in the churchyard at night, and that the malignant emanation that crept about him was a mere figment of his own imaginings. With every nerve alert with fear, he went towards the nearest grave, and bent down to plant his stake.

Somehow it seemed to him a horrible thing to do, as if he were mocking the spirit of dead to satisfy his own pride. The ground was frozen so hard that it took some time to force the stick through the snow into the earth, and as he worked, a cold perspiration broke out all over his body. What if the dead one should resent his presence there, and disapprove of his yabbling boasting? But that was nonsense—and he was doing no harm. Hurry, only hurry, and be gone. Merciful Heaven, what was that? Some snow slid off the tombstone with the faintest of sounds, and Ivan's blood curdled to his heart. The trembling of his hands delayed him.

At length the stick was firmly planted, and he was ready to go. But as he raised himself, he felt himself being pulled back, drawn down to the grave again. He screamed aloud in an agony of terror, and his voice echoed back again and again. Oh, Holy Mother of God, what could it be? But he Shells Or Bullets For Aeroplane Guns.

FAST MACHINE PROBLEM

Paris. Argument is raging in French Military aviation circles as to whether fighting aeroplanes should fire shells or bullets. The latest French experimental war machines have their engines placed behind the pilot and are equipped with a gun firing 1½ inch shells.

The anti-bullet experts point out that in the Great War aeroplanes were hit by as many as 48 incendiary bullets without causing vital damage; and that it was usually necessary to hit either the pilot or the engine to bring down a machine.

On the other hand, the anti-shell experts claim that modern aircraft flying at speeds around 200 miles an hour would be almost impossible to hit with shells, which cannot be fired in almost solid streams as can bullets from machineguns.—Reuter.

TWO WOMEN FIGHT FOR ONE MAN

Italy Puzzled By Dual Identity.

HERO OR CRIMINAL?

Genoa.
When the liner "Conte Grande" sailed out of Genoa harbour for Rio de Janeiro recently there stood on the deck a man whose dual identity has puzzled the whole of Italy.

This man, who in the eyes of the law is Mario Bruneri, but who is called by his friends Giulio Canella, was the central figure in one of the strangest lawsuits in history. Several persons called Bruneri have changed their name to avoid the glare of publicity.

In 1926, an inmate of Collegno Lunatic Asylum, described as suffering from loss of memory, was recognised by Signora Canella, a wealthy resident of Verona, as her husband who had been given up as having been killed on the Salonika front in 1918.

The man quickly recovered his memory and vowed he was her husband. After a touching reunion with Signora Canella's children he went to live with her at her luxurious villa.

A few days later another woman, Signora Bruneri, of Turin, said she recognised him as her missing husband Mario Bruneri, a printer and escaped convict.

The fight between the two women for the man they both claimed, carried up to the highest tribunal in Italy, stirred the imagination of the whole country.

Signora Canella placed the whole of her fortune at his disposal. The Bishop of Verona testified that he recognised him as Canella.

But the court decided that he was Bruneri, and in 1931 sent him to prison for four years.

On his release last spring, he was met at the prison gates by Signora Canella and her three children—a crowd of spectators.

Taking Signora Canella by the hand he turned to the crowd and cried, "Here is the heroine of this drama. Here is my adored wife!"

His release revived the controversy, and its echoes pursued the couple into the seclusion of their life in Verona.

He decided to take Signora Canella and the children to Brazil. Applying for a passport as "Giulio Canella," he was gravely informed by the authorities that no such person was known to exist.

Swallowing his pride, he applied as Mario Bruneri, and the passport was granted. But his companion is described in her passport as Signora Canella.

They hope in the new world to escape the lime-light which has pursued them in the old.—Reuter.

LANCASHIRE SLUMS TO GO

Re-Building Plans In Two Biggest Cities.

£13,000,000 TO BE SPENT

London.

The largest clearance of slum property ever undertaken in any county in England is to be undertaken by the Lancashire cities of Liverpool and Manchester.

The building schemes of the two Corporations will cost together between thirteen and sixteen million pounds.

The Manchester City Council has approved a five years' plan, involving capital expenditure estimated at anything from £5,000,000 to £8,000,000. The aim is to demolish 15,000 houses, and get rid of all the city's slums in five years.

The Liverpool Corporation's scheme will be spread over 10 years and will cost £7,700,000. A total of 12,742 houses are to be pulled down, and more than 15,000 dwellings accommodating 63,000 persons are to be built in their stead.

Of these houses, five thousand will be self-contained cottages in garden suburbs on the fringe of the country, and the remainder will be tenements housing people close to their work.

Liverpool's plan will employ two thousand men on building alone, apart from pulling down the slums, over a period of ten years.—Reuter.

knew what it was. It was the outraged dead one pulling him down to share the desecrated grave. Fear had given place to sheer blind panic.

Once more he tried to move, and found that he could not. Now he gave vent to cry after cry. There was no one to hear him, but pure terror had robbed him of every other sense, and he could no longer think at all. He crouched there, gibbering, his reason quite gone, making no more effort to free himself from the unseen hands that clutched at him from the grave, because he knew that they would not release him. With a final sob, he fell prone on his face, and after a short time ceased to move.

They found him the next day lying over a grave with a wooden cross at its head from which the snow had fallen.

They had some difficulty in moving him, and when they managed to raise him, they found that he had driven the stake clean through a corner of his long coat, securely pinning himself to the ground.

Such an expression of horror and madness was frozen on to his dead face that they covered their eyes when they had looked at him.

SCHOLARLY POLICEMEN FOR LONDON

Metropolitan Police
College Training.

BIGGER WARDROBES
WANTED

London.

The London policeman of the future will be an impressive person, with a knowledge of science and foreign languages, and a private wardrobe that many would envy.

Lord Trenchard, the Police Commissioner, has just issued a booklet giving in detail all necessary information for those who wish to become candidates for the Metropolitan Police College.

The number to be taken into the college during the first year will be about 60, divided into two groups, the first in the late Spring and the second in September.

Approximately two-thirds of this total will be selected from those now serving in the Metropolitan Force as sergeants and constables who are still under 28 years of age.

The remaining third will be chosen by examination, the subjects for which will be:

Part I (Obligatory): English, general knowledge, interview and record. One of the following: a modern language, general history, elementary mathematics, or every-day science.

Part II (Optional): Latin, Greek, French, German, modern history, lower mathematics, higher mathematics, physics and chemistry, and Biology.

Only two optional subjects may be offered by a candidate.

The standard in the obligatory subjects is not particularly high, but in the optional subjects, such as modern history, a future policeman may be expected to know about—the decline in the power of Holland, the unification of Italy, or the action of Russia in the Near East, the Middle East and the Far East.

Among the plain clothes which a student at the college will have to provide are three pairs of flannel trousers, two lounge suits, one dinner suit, four dress shirts and three pairs of shoes.—Reuter.

AMERICAN LIVES IN RAILWAY COACH.

The Only Place Where He Feels At Home.

Minneapolis (Minnesota).

Mr. Rahn, of Minneapolis, has spent so much of his life travelling in trains that he no longer feels at home anywhere else.

So he has bought an old railway Pullman carriage and had fitted it up as his permanent home.

He has installed a shower bath and modern plumbing in the carriage and built a cement basement underneath.—Reuter.

The idea that "once a professional, always a professional," should be banished. If sports is a man's chosen sphere, then, as long as it is that, let him play it a hundred per cent, and compete against all comers. Or, if other interests call him away, but he remains fond of his game and wishes to continue to shine at it, when let the controlling body concerned look in a kindly way on any such transfer of interests and energy.

We do not want dishonest amateurs. Too many sports already almost seem to encourage them. But all class ideas must go. I want to see much more fluidity between amateurs and professionals. I would like to have professionals admitted even to boards of control.

WOMEN CABARET DANCERS.

Banned From Calcutta Restaurants.

Calcutta.

Women cabaret entertainers will no longer add to the amenities at Calcutta's restaurants.

Some cases of minor girls employed for this kind of entertainment are said to have come to light and influential opinion took matters in hand.

A new clause in Restaurant License forbids the employment of women or girls in premises where alcohol is sold.

(Several instances are said to have come to official notice in which women dancers—mostly Anglo-Brahmins—have appeared in circumstances that were not in the interests of the public.—Reuter.

Popular Liner To Be Broken Up
America Disposing Of Foreign Tonnage.
FAMOUS WAR-TIME TRANSPORT
New York.

The Red Star liner, "Lapland," one of the most popular passenger vessels afloat has been sold to the shipbreakers, according to an announcement by Mr. P. V. G. Mitchell, Vice-President of the International Mercantile Marine-Roosevelt Company, which owns the Red Star line.

"The sale of the 'Lapland,'" he said, "is in accordance with the policy of the Shipping Board which has frequently emphasised the importance of American shipping companies divesting themselves of their foreign flag tonnage."

In selling the "Lapland" the International Mercantile Marine-Roosevelt Company continues its policy, begun with the sale of the White Star Line in 1926, of disposing of its foreign flag ships.

The "Lapland," 18,866 tons, was built at the Harland and Wolff yards, Belfast, Ireland, in 1908, for the Red Star Line's New York-Antwerp service. Her maiden voyage was an occasion of celebration in Antwerp, for she was the largest liner ever to use that port. She was constantly employed in this service, except for the war years, until two years ago. Recently the "Lapland" made successful cruises from England to Mediterranean ports and Atlantic Isles.

The "Lapland" during the war was steadily employed as a transport. Because of honours acquired in recognition of her notable service she had long been known in England as "the Tablet Ship." No less than 10 memorials in brass adorn the bulkheads of her main companionway, commemorating American and Canadian units which crossed the sea in her to participate in the war.—Reuter.

"MAYORESS" TITLE DISCARDED.
New Nazi Decree For Women.
Berlin.

Another Nazi step in the "demotion" of women has been taken by the mayor of Stuttgart, Dr. Stroelin. He is to discard the title of "Mayoreess."

Dr. Stroelin has ordered that wives shall not call themselves by their husband's title, prefixed by "Frau"—as has been the German custom. There will be no more "Mrs. Councillor's," or "Mrs. Alderman's."

He explains that the title belongs to the officers, not to his wife.—Reuter.

Schoolgirl Runs Away With Football Hero.
WORKING WAY TO NEVADA
Cleveland, Ohio.

Fourteen-year-old Doris Jones, of Ideal Beach, New Jersey, and her football hero lover, 19-year-old Robert Babst, of Red Banks, New Jersey, were found asleep in a shop doorway and there their elopement to Nevada ended.

For three days, the girl told police, they had lived variedly on meat balls and buns, and they spent their entire capital of about $2.50 on food.

"We decided," said the girl, "we would not live apart any more. We decided to work our way to Nevada. You see, I'll be 15 soon. They say you can get married when you're 15 in Nevada."

They met, she said, when they were in the same geometry class last year at Leonardo High School where Robert was a senior and Doris a junior. This year Robert took a post-graduate course and "well," said Doris, "we just fell in love."

Robert, she explained, was a football fullback and also won the New Jersey championship for discus throwing.—Reuter.
